

January 12, 2018 5:50 AM Age: 306 days

First Amendment Goose Bumps

Category: AC RSS, CSR News, CSR Commentary & Opinion, ERM News, ERM Commentary & Opinion, Ethics News, Ethics Commentary & Opinion, GPG News, GPG Commentary & Opinion, ESG Highlights
Source: Larry Checco, featured commentator

User Toolbox

email print

comment pdf

When Katherine Graham gave Ben Bradley the go-ahead to publish the Pentagon Papers, I got goose bumps.

If you don't know what I'm talking about, go see Steven Spielberg's new movie, The Post.

My goose bumps weren't the result of actors Meryl Streep's and Tom Hanks' fine acting ability, although both turned in Oscar-quality performances.

No, those goose bumps rose because -- in what now seems like a long time ago in a galaxy far, far away -- there existed people like Publisher Katherine Graham, Editor Ben Bradley, Daniel Ellsberg and others, including executives of The New York Times, who made extremely difficult, potentially life-altering decisions, not for personal or political gain, but because they knew the decisions they were making were ethically and morally correct.

Although threatened and excoriated by a government swathed in secrecy and paranoia?namely, the Nixon Administration ? these people deeply believed that the citizens of the United States of America had a right to know that their government, over the course of 30 years and five presidents, had been lying to them.

The cost of those lies translated into the deaths of two million Vietnamese, many of whom were innocent women and children, nearly 60,000 American GIs, and about $1 trillion U.S. taxpayer dollars when adjusted for inflation.

Why the lies that prolonged the war?

No administration?from Harry Truman?s to Richard Nixon?s?wanted to go down in history as having ?lost? Vietnam to communism. It was more about losing political face than winning a war.

According to the Pentagon Papers, 10 percent of the war was fought to help the people of Vietnam, 20% to contain Communist China, and a full 70% to save face.

However, the principal characters in this courageous escapade to uphold the First Amendment of the U.S. Constitution and to publish had more to lose than face.

Ellsberg, who photocopied-- by hand -- 7,000 pages of the Rand Report that became known as the Pentagon Papers, faced life imprisonment for treason. The leaders of The Washington Post -- Graham and Bradley -- also risked jail time, their reputations, and in the case of Graham, The Washington Post, itself. The movie does a great job dramatizing all of this.

Fact is the First Amendment of our Constitution states: Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

That's a lot of serious ground covered in a mere 45 words.

But if you are a strict constructionist of the constitution, which many in this current administration are, the code is clear, ?'Congress shall make no law?'abridging the freedom?'of the press.'?

What the U.S. Constitution does not address, however, is how far our political leaders and others can go in trashing or discrediting that free press, or what we now call 'the media'.

Who you trust is paramount to what you believe.

With the advent of fake news?'promoted from the highest levels of our government, no less?'we've entered into a very squirrely state in our democracy.

Consider: If, in 1971, we believed that the publication of the Pentagon Papers was nothing more than the mainstream media perpetrating a conspiracy against the U.S. government'as many have been led to believe the media is doing today?'the Vietnam War may have gone on for several more years. As it is, the war didn't end until April 1975.

We have faced many crises since the inception of our democracy, but few as serious as the assault our free press is experiencing today. If all we have is a government dictating to us what its truth is, history has proven we're in deep do-do.

Kudos to today's Grahams, Bradleys and Ellsbergs who are still out there, acting as checks on our government, trying to keep it honest. If that check goes, so does our democracy.

Go see the movie The Post. You'll better understand what I mean. You may even get goose bumps.

Larry Checco

Content Copyright © 2018 ? All Rights Reserved

3033 times viewed

<- Back to: Single View - Default

Click here to tip a friend about this page!